

PROCESSION

A watercolor painting depicting a procession. In the foreground, a large, textured, reddish-brown sphere is prominent. Below it, a path leads towards a group of figures. One figure is seated on a bench, while others stand nearby. The background features a large, dark, curved shape that resembles a wing or a canopy. The overall style is expressive and abstract, with bold outlines and a rich color palette.

Marco Alzamora

www.blogizazilli.com

Marco Alzamora
2012 watercolor painting

Marco Alzamora

wikilivros

Procession

Procession ... Journey ... March ... Pilgrimage ... Flock of Birds and Souls! And so goes humanity! Either running or sometimes just walking. When well-organized ... They March! When tired ... they just drag along! It seems that the whole world is going to the streets to demonstrate desideratum purpose for some material or spiritual or others whose real identity can be a product of the new era. The coming of the Pope of the Catholic Church in Brazil entails a journey.

Clique aqui para obter este livro